THE AIM of this booklet is to provide an Index of the Headings under which aifferent industries appear in the 1968 edition of the Standard Industrial Classification. For this purpose the names of industries have been re-arranged in alphabetical order. Alongside each is given the Minimum List Heading to which the industry is classified. The numbers of Minimum List Headings are those in the Standard Industrial Classification. Thus the entry 'Addressing machine manufacture' is classified in Minimum List Heading 338—Office machinery, while the entry. Alkali manufacture 271/1' means that the industry 'Alkali manufacture' is classified in Minimum List Heading 271—General Chemicals, Sub-division 1—Inorganic chemicals.

NOTE

Industries and different classes of activity may be known under different names Some industries have been classified in this alphabetical index under alternative titles by which they may be described but it has obviously not been possible to list separately all possible variations in these titles Words such as 'manufacturing' and 'making' can often be regarded as inter-changeable and 'dealer' taken as synonymous with 'shopkeeper', 'merchant', 'agent', 'broker', or 'factor'

Self-employed commercial travellers, manufacturers' agents and representatives are classified with the dealers or merchants handling the same commodity or range of commodities Wholesale merchants (general or undefined) are classified in Heading 812/5

The making-up of knitted clothes in knitting establishments is classified in Heading 417, but the making-up of clothes cut from purchased knitted fabric is classified with the making-up of other clothing in Heading 444, 445, or 449

Introduction

A Standard Indistrial Classification was first issued in 1948 to promote uniformity and unparability in official statistics of the United Kingdom, and in 1958 a revise-edition was published incorporating a number of changes, although the main tramework of the Classification was retained. Since then there have beer changes in the organisation and relative importance of a number of indistries which have made further revisions to the classification desirable. This new edition of the Standard Industrial Classification has again been preared by an Inter-departmental Committee on which the principal departments collecting statistics have been represented. The Committee wishes 30 acknowledge the help received from trade organisations and individual eperts familiar with different industries.

2 The International Standard Industrial Classification of all Economic Activities issued by the United Nations, which has recently been revised, has been taken ato account in the preparation and revision of the Standard Industrial Classification for the United Kingdom and the same general principles have been followed.

The basis of classification

3. The Classification is based on industries and not on occupations All persons (includag administrative, technical, clerical and ancillary staffs) employed in a 'unit' of industry are included, irrespective of their occupations, in the fighres of employment for the industry to which the 'unit' is classified. The classification is also based on industries without regard to who owns or operates them. Thus manufacturing 'units' owned or operated by the Central Government are classified in the same way as those in private hands and are not included under 'National Government Service'. Similarly the tansport services operated by local authorities are included under 'Transpot' and not under 'Local Government Service'.

4. The Classification has been prepared to conform with the organisation and structure  $g_{1}^{t}$  industry and trade as it exists within the United Kingdom All relevant factors such as the commodity produced or service given, the raw materials liked and the nature of the process or the work done, have been taken into consideration

5. The Classification is arranged in a list of industry headings which show the minimum  $\beta_{\text{tail}}$  in which statistics by industry will normally be provided, and which are therefore called Minimum List Headings The Headings of related industies are grouped into Orders

Classification of establishments

6 For the purpose of this classification the unit taken is the 'establishment' An establishment is the smallest unit which can provide the information normally required for an economic census, for example, employment, expenses, turnover, capital formation Usually the principal activities carried on in an establishment fall within a single heading of the Classification (eg steel making or sugar refining) Typically the establishment embraces all the activities carried on at a single address, eg a farm, a mine or a factory, including those which are ancillary to the principal activities

7. Frequently, distinct activities characteristic of different industries are carried on at one address, e.g. cotton weaving and the making up of household textiles, but normally these are not classified separately, and the whole establishment is classified according to the main activity. If, however, the required range of data can be provided for each activity, each is taken to constitute a separate establishment.

8. Sometimes activities which are conducted as a single business are carried on at a number of addresses Where this is so businesses are asked to provide the full range of separate information in respect of each address, whether or not the activities are different. Their activities may however be integrated to such an extent that they constitute a single establishment. In that case, the establishment is defined to cover the combined activities at these addresses, which in the case of manufacturing establishments would normally be in close proximity. For some subjects, however, e.g. employment, separate data will be available for each address. In such circumstances each address will be identified as a 'local unit' and can be classified in either of the following ways according to the purpose for which statistical data are needed, viz (a) to the classification of the establishment of which it is part or (b) to the classification appropriate to its own major activity As appropriate, statistics will be prepared on either or both bases of classification

9 Activities which are ancillary to the main activities of a business are most frequently transport, wholesale or retail distribution, construction, power generation, and research and development. The classification of these ancillary units, other than separate offices, is determined according to the circumstances, as follows

- (a) If a full range of information can be provided they are counted as separate establishments and classified according to their own activities
- (b) Where a full range of information cannot be provided the establishment within which they are integrated is defined to include them Where they are carried on at a separate address, they are, however, separately identified as local units classified in accordance with the principle outlined in paragraph 8 Separately obtainable particulars for them, e.g. of employment, may be required for purposes of geographical analysis

10. A number of businesses have Head Offices or other Central Offices at separate locations from those of the establishments at which the main activities of the business are carried out These separate offices present a special problem, since they do not have any measurable output of their own but contribute to that of the establishment(s) which they serve. The treatment of these offices is described below

Central offices of businesses operating in the United Kingdom are classified as follows.

- (1) If all or most of the activities of the establishments served by the office are appropriate to a single Heading, the office is treated as a local unit of an establishment classified in that Heading.
- (2) If all or most of the activities of the establishments served by the office are appropriate to a single Order the office is treated as a local unit of an establishment classified in the Heading within that Order appropriate to the largest part of these activities.
- (3) If neither (1) nor (2) above applies, the office is treated as an independent establishment and classified in Heading 866

Any activities of branches or subsidiary companets operating overseas, with which part of the business of a central office is concerned, are regarded as falling outside the Order(s) appropriate to the horne activities of the business but are taken into account in applying the foregoing rules to the office

The United Kingdom offices of businesses operating mainly abroad are classified in Heading 866

11 Some special points should be mentioned

---- --

1

- (a) Merchanting activities Establishments mainly engaged in merchanting, broking, importing and exporting are classified in the distributive trades, and not in the industry or trade producing the goods in which they deal
- (b) Repair work. Most kinds of repair work are associated with activities which are classified either to manufacturing or to distribution and in these cases the underlying principle of classification is that where the bulk of the repair work on goods of any particular type is carried out by manufacturers, any establishments specializing in the repair of these goods are classified to manufacturing. Where, however, most of the repairs are carried out at establishments whose main business is distribution the specialist repair establishments are also classified to distribution.

Thus establishments repairing radio and television sets, watches and clocks, furniture, etc are classified to the distributive trades. Establishments engaged in the repair of ships, locomotives, aircraft, and most kinds of plant and machinery are classified to manufacturing industry.

In a few cases repair work is not classified to either manufacturing or distribution. Establishments engaged in the repair and maintenance of buildings are included in Construction. The activities of motor repairing and boot and shoe repairing, which are regarded as services, are sufficiently extensive and distinct to be treated as industries in themselves although particular establishments may engage to some extent in manufacturing or distributive activities. Provision is made for these two kinds of repair work in Miscellaneous Services

(c) Installation work The installation of machinery equipment, etc is an activity which is normally carried out by an establishment having a different major activity, which decides its industrial classification. Where, however, installation is the only, or major, activity of a separate establishment or department for which the full range of data can be provided, it should be classified to an appropriate Heading in the following Orders, according to the kind of service provided

- Construction The installation of items or equipment which can be regarded as forming an integral part of the building e g an electrical wiring system, heating and ventilating equipment
- Distribution The installation of items which require little more than the connection of the equipment to the mains e.g. domestic washing machines, television sets

Description of the Classification

12. The Standard Classification which is given in detail in the following pages consists of 181 Minimum List Headings which are distinguished by arabic numerals These Minimum List Headings have been grouped into 27 Orders which are distinguished by roman numerals Gaps in the sequences of numbering the Headings with each Order have been left to permit additions to the Minimum List which may be necessary at a later date. Optional sub-divisions of many items in the Minimum List are given They are suggested for use where a more detailed classification is required.

13. The numbers of the Minimum List Headings are given on the left-hand side of each page The notation constitutes a code suitable for identifying Orders and certain other groupings (see Appendix)

14. A brief description of the main industries or services included is given below the title of each heading or sub-division. It should be noted that these descriptions refer to the classification of 'establishments' as defined in paragraphs 6-10. The establishments classified under any particular heading will not necessarily account for the whole of the output of the products or services listed under that heading. On the other hand, they may produce some goods or services which are mainly produced by establishments classified under other headings.

15. An Alphabetical List of Industries which constitutes an index for use in conjunction with the Standard Industrial Classification will be published shortly as a companion volume
