Q597 [VioGra12] *

We have been talking about films and videos containing violence, but there are, of course, different ways of handling violence within a film. Some films contain violent scenes which are part of a developing story. Others show violent scenes which don't seem to be essential to the plot.

Think first of a film containing a scene of someone being repeatedly stabbed and cut, filmed in close-up, that does not seem to be essential to the plot. Should it ever, in your view be allowed to be...
