Bibliography

This is not a reading list for Domesday Book and is in no way intended to supplant Bates, A Bibliography of Domesday Book (1986), which can be supplemented by Hallam, 'Some Current Domesday Research Trends and Recent Publications', in Hallam and Bates, Domesday Book, pp. 191-198.

The present list contains fuller details of books and articles cited in the notes where they have been given only short titles. This is essentially a working bibliography for those re-editing the Phillimore printed edition of Domesday Book and some books and articles are included relating to counties whose revision has yet to be published. The whole bibliography will receive a full revision, when completed.

It has been the policy of this revision to expand all abbreviations (so, for example, UVL is now 'ultra-violet lamp'). The only remaining abbreviation of a book-title is VCH (Victoria County History). Contributors to the notes are, however, referred to by their initials:

Books and Articles cited in the Notes

- Domesday Book. It consists of Great Domesday Book and Little Domesday Book. The general term 'Domesday Book' is used when referring to matters common to both texts. The manuscripts of both, together with other associated documents were transcribed, set in special type and published in four volumes as Domesday Book, associated texts, introduction and indices, (Record Commission), London 1783-1816.
 - (1) Volume 1 contains Great Domesday.
 - (2) Volume 2 contains Little Domesday
 - (3) Volume 3 Libri Censualis Vocati Domesday Book, Additamenta ex Codic. Antiquiss., comprising the Liber Exoniensis (Exon. Domesday), the Inquisitio Eliensis, the Liber Wintoniensis ('Winton or Winchester Domesday), Boldon Book; (this is volume 4 in some bindings).
 - (4) Volume 4 contains the General Introduction and Indices; see Ellis, General Introduction to Domesday Book
 - (5) Volumes 1-2 were transcribed by Abraham Farley and his work is referred to as 'Farley'. Volume 3 was edited by H. Ellis and the transcription of the Liber Exoniensis was carried out by Ralph Barnes, chapter clerk of Exeter cathedral. Volume 3 is referred to as Ellis, Domesday Book, iii. (Libri Censualis)
