1. Introduction

The Millennium Cohort Study (MCS) is a multidisciplinary survey that follows the lives of around 19,000 young people born in the UK in 2000-02. It covers a wide range of topics that could influence cohort members development and outcomes throughout childhood and adolescence. It collects information about cohort member's physical, socio-emotional, cognitive and behavioural development, as well as parental health; parents' employment and education, income and poverty; housing; neighbourhood; among other topics.

Since 2001/2, there have been 7 surveys. The first survey was in 2001/2 when cohort members were around 9 months old, and the second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth surveys were, respectively, in 2003/4 (3 years old), 2005/6 (5 years old), 2008/9 (7 years old), 2012/3 (11 years old), and 2015/6 (14 years old). The most recent survey was in 2018/9, when cohort members were around 17 years old.

This document describes the linkage between the MCS and the Ordnance Survey Point of Interest (PoI) data. The fourth, fifth and sixth sweeps of the MCS data were linked to the PoI data to characterise the physical environment around cohort member residences at the moment of the interview. We linked only these three surveys because the PoI data was consistently available since 2005 onwards, and the seventh MCS survey was not available when this project was conducted. GIS methods were used together with the Ordnance Survey Integrated Transport Network (ITN) data to create buffers around cohort member's residences. Counts of points of interest, e.g., supermarkets, convenience stores, and others, were created within 400, 800 and 1600 metres buffers. The categories defined by the PoI data were used to aggregate information, and new categories were derived for specific food outlets.

The following sections describe the PoI and ITN data, the methods and parameters considered when aggregating geospatial data, and a description of the data and derived variables.

2. Ordnance Survey Data

2.1 Ordnance Survey Point of Interest (PoI)

Points of Interest (POI) is a dataset containing around 4 million different geographic features. All features are supplied with location, practical information and addresses where possible. It has been available annually from 2005-2013 and quarterly from September 2014, covering all of Great Britain. Facilities are assigned to a three-level classification scheme created by the Ordnance Survey, where the first level of classification, comprising nine groups, is given in Table 11 (OS 2015). In the second and third level, 53 categories and 600+ classes are used to classify point of interests.

Table 1. Summary of Points of Interest group categories

Group	Group description
01	Accommodation, eating and drinking
02	Commercial services
03	Attractions
04	Sport and entertainment
05	Education and health
06	Public infrastructure
07	Manufacturing and production
09	Retail
10	Transport

Note: The numbering of groups corresponds to the original PoI classification, which does not include category 08.

The productive surveys of the fourth, fifth and sixth MCS sweeps were linked to the PoI data from Septembers of 2008, 2012 and 2015. PoI data was obtained using an educational licence and mapped using ArcGIS 10.4. Interviews in Northern Ireland were excluded because PoI data is not available.

¹ More details can be found in <https://www.ordnancesurvey.co.uk/business-government/products/points-of-interest>

2.2. Ordnance Survey Integrated Transport Network (ITN)

The ITN data is a topological snapshot of the entire road network of Great Britain, which contains road-routing information, including one-way streets, banned turns, and access restrictions (OS 2017).² We use this data to construct road network-based buffers of different distances around each cohort member's home - specifically, the postcode centroid of the address at the interview in each sweep. Data from October 2008, June 2012, and June 2015 were used to derive the network-based buffers in the fourth, fifth and sixth MCS sweeps.

3. Linkage Methods

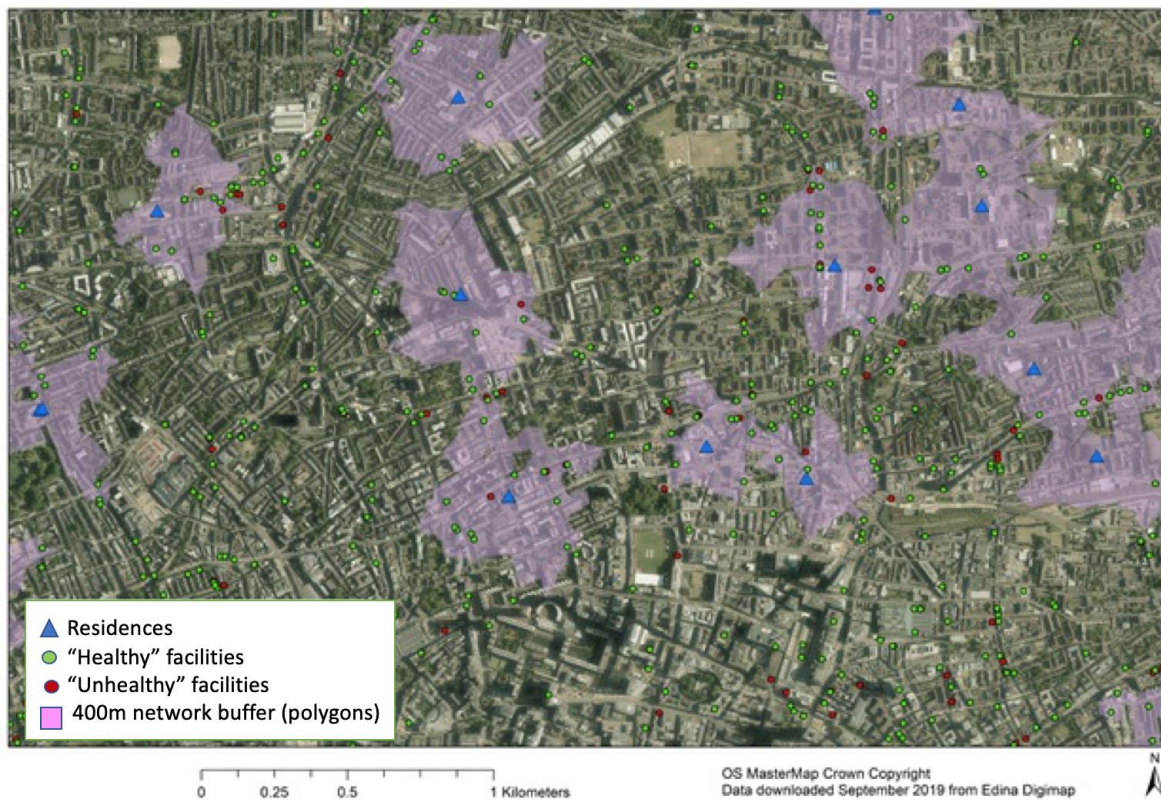

3.1. Network-based buffer

We used GIS methods to construct 400, 800, and 1600 metres network-based buffers around cohort member's residences using the ITN data. The buffers were created using the postcode centroid of the address at the interview. The distances were chosen as they are the most prevalent in Retail Food Environment research (Wilkins, Radley et al. 2019), and they equate, respectively, to an average person's 5 minutes, 10 minutes, and 15 minutes walking distance (Figure 1).

Once the buffers were created for each cohort member's residence and each MCS sweeps, we derived variables defined as the count of point of interest within each buffer.

Notes: This figure shows geo-data created only for descriptive purposes. It does not include cohort member’s residences.

3.2. Changes in the Pol classification scheme

The Pol classification scheme slightly changed during the MCS fieldwork period considered in this data linkage, from 2008 (MCS4) to 2016 (MCS6). The October 2008 Pol data used the ‘Points of interest classification scheme Version 2.3’, whereas the June 2012 and June 2015 data used the ‘Points of interest classification scheme Version 3.1’. The main differences between the two versions are that new categories were added, and some old categories were grouped. For instance, of the 648 classes in v2.3, 515 did not change (79.5%), 58 (9.0%) changed only the class name, and 22 (3.4%) specific restaurants outlets (‘Japanese restaurants’, ‘Spanish restaurants’, and others) were aggregated in a new class named ‘Restaurants’. In Table A.1 in Appendix, we provide a detailed description of changes between both versions.

Three groups of variables were derived using the Pol data:

- The first group includes 24 categories of the second level Pol scheme that did not change between both versions of Pol data (Table 2).

- The second group includes 18 classes of the third level Pol scheme that characterise the food facilities available in the Pol data (Table 3).
- The third group includes nine derived categories that identify specific fast food restaurants (Table 4).

The first two groups were created using the Pol classification scheme, whereas the third group was derived using the commercial store name recorded in the Pol data.

In the third group of variables, we search for the following fast food restaurants: McDonald's, KFC, Burger King, Wimpy, Subway, Pizza Hut, and Dominos' Pizza.

Additionally, we derived a variable to classify kebab and chicken outlets. We created this variable by looking at restaurants classified as food outlets and containing the words 'Kebab' and/or 'Chicken' in its commercial name. Finally, fish and chips shops, a common take-away food in the UK, was identified using the available category in the Pol data.

3.3. Linkage to MCS data

Data was linked to the PoI databased based on cohort member's postcode during sweeps 4, 5 and 6. Entries in this dataset are identified via corresponding MCS ID so data can be linked to other MCS data. Only productive interviews were included. Table 5 shows the number of productive surveys by MCS sweep included in the linked data.

4	12,474
5	11,974
6	10,600

4. Description of the Linked Data

4.1 Licencing and data access

This dataset is made available under End User Licence (EUL) from the UK Data Service (UKDS).

All users of the data need to be registered with the UKDS. Details of how to do this are available at <https://www.ukdataservice.ac.uk/get-data/how-to-access/registration>.

The data is provided as a single file, which can be downloaded once the EUL access conditions have been accepted by the user.

4.2 MCS identifier

The linked data are identified with the MCS cohort member household identifier (MCSID) and include the MCS sweep (sweep).

The MCSID identifier can be used to merge the data to the rest of cohort data available at the UKDS.

4.3 Variable names

The MCS data linked to PoI is in a long format, there is one row per respondent-sweep.

The data contains variables for each category and network-based buffers as described in the previous section. For each category in Tables 2, 3 and 4 we include three variables: the number of points of interest within 400, 800 and 1600 meters. Excluding MCS ID and sweep number there are 180 variables in this dataset.

The names of the variables in the linked data were created using the columns 'category number' in Table 2, the 'Pointx Classification code' in Table 3, and the 'Derived category' in Table 4. For example, the variables 'N101_H400', 'N101_H800' and 'N101_H1600', are defined, respectively, as the count of outlets in the category 'Accommodation' within 400, 600, 1800 meters network-based buffers.
